Geralyn Lambert-Messerlian, Ph.D.
Laboratory Assessment of Ovarian Reserve:
Anti-Müllerian Hormone (AMH)

Thursday, February 12, 2015

Dr. Lambert-Messerlian is Professor of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine at Alpert Medical School of Brown University and Laboratory Director at Women & Infants Hospital in the Division of Prenatal and Special Testing. Her work with the reproductive hormone inhibin proved instrumental in the development of clinical applications for fertility, cancer and prenatal screening for Down syndrome— a test now used throughout the world. She has ongoing research projects in biomarker testing for women's health, including AMH for fertility, HE4 for ovarian cancer and cell free DNA for fetal aneuploidy.

She is a member of the Endocrine Society, AACC, the Association for Reproductive Medicine and the New England Fertility Society.
